"I HELP FARMERS GET FARM LOANS"

My name is Elizabeth Gnoinski, Mortgage Agent. My parents owned a dairy farm in Ontario. My brothers and sisters all helped out with the farm. My dad got sick, the bank refused to give us time to sort out our finances, and we lost our farm through no fault of our own. I will never forget that!

I grew up and had a hobby farm. It was a tough go with brutal cold and snowy winters and a short growing season.

I UNDERSTAND THE CHALLENGES YOU FACE!

I became a licenced mortgage agent with Expert Mortgage so that I could help farmers across Ontario.

I specialize in AGRICULTURAL LENDING. With over 400 private lenders to back me combined with my farming background, I work hard for you!

Hay Handler

You already know how weather-dependent making premium hay can be. It's the Hay Handler's job to work on your side, making the most of the haying windows the weather permits you. With it, you can merge invert, fluff or windrow your cut swaths.

But what sets the Hay Handler apart is the ease with which it handles hay pickup. With it, you can pick up a 10' wide swath of hay that has been laid out by your discbine and reduce its drying time. With the hay handler, you can mow in the morning and do haylage in the evening.

10 TIPS TO HELP FARMERS BE PREPARED FOR TAX SEASON

As the old adage goes, “the taxman cometh.”

It’s almost tax time and like everyone else, farmers want to get the largest return possible.

Here are 10 tips for farmers to ensure they’re prepared as possible

1. Keep good records –keep all records up to date because disorganized books can be a reason to get audited.
2. Always file a tax return and file on time
3. Time capital gains and losses to reduce your overall tax burden – If farmers earn a capital gain early in the tax year, they can choose to recognize capital losses near the end of the year to offset the gains.
4. Plan borrowing to avoid losing tax deductions – Separating loans between personal and business can help tax preparers and CRA identify tax deduction opportunities.
5. Make mortgage interest tax deductible – Farmers could consider refinancing and investing the equity into their business.
6. Know your capital gain reserve benefits for property to a child – The reserve can be claimed up to a maximum of nine year, which spreads out the capital gain over 10 years. The maximum reserve is calculated as a percentage of the capital gain and can be claimed each year.
7. Use spousal RRSP to split income – Moving reportable income to the spouse in a lower tax bracket can help ensure less tax is paid on the same income upon retirement.
8. Plan RRSP contributions – Tax deductions of RRSPs may be better used in years when you can anticipate a higher net income, whereas TFSA’s could be an option for years with lower incomes.
9. Invest in a TFSA – Earned interest or capital appreciation is not included as income.
10. Have a risk management plan – Farm risk management plans at the provincial and federal levels can help farmers protect their farm income and investments from unforeseen market circumstances.

SUCCESSION PLANNING

When it comes to having a family-run farm operation remain that way, succession planning can be an uncomfortable, sensitive, but at the same time necessary step.

People can't, or don't want to run the farms forever and having a plan in place focusing on how to move forward once the time comes can make things a little easier during transition periods.

One of, if not the most important element of succession planning is communication. Communicating the intentions, timeline, questions and concerns will help keep the transition period transparent and allow for everyone involved to be on the same page.

Here are some things to consider when succession planning is on the horizon.

START EARLY, INVOLVE EVERYONE AND REVIEW

Beginning the succession planning process early allows for more time to consider every element of the plan itself. The plan may not come into effect for an extended period of time, but it doesn't hurt to be prepared.

By involving everyone involved with the farm in the process, it allows for more avenues of communication and for roles to be defined. Some people may not want to be involved with the farm, whereas others want to be heavily involved in the daily operations. Bringing everyone to the table can make it easier to decide where people stand on the succession plan and the future of the farm.

Reviewing the succession plan on a regular basis can allow for the plan to be fresh in the minds of those involved. In the event of someone changing their minds and wanting a different part in the plan, the issues can be tackled in a timely manner and the succession plan can move forward.

IDENTIFY SUCCESSOR, GOALS AND OBJECTIVES

Throughout the succession planning process, someone should be chosen or volunteer to be the successor of the farm.

Without goals and objectives in mind, the succession plan may not be very viable. Coming up with a list of them can help the succession plan get off the ground and gain momentum. Some objectives can include meeting a certain profit margin, introducing new crops or equipment and deciding to sell or lease some of the land.

LEAVE NO STONE UNTURNED

Consider every "what if" option. What if someone gets sick and can't help out as much? What if someone decides to leave the farm? What if members of the family go through a divorce? Or a natural disaster? Having these conversations, regardless of how uncomfortable they can be, can help ensure that there are no surprises in the future.

INTRODUCE AN OUTSIDE SOURCE

Having conversations with anyone about money, assets and business can be a difficult task. When the conversations are taking place between family members, it can be even more difficult trying to separate personal feelings from what's best for the business and the farm.

Consulting an outside source like a financial advisor that specializes in succession planning can help the tough conversations take place while separating personal and business interests.

Again, succession planning can be a sensitive issue but it is a necessary issue that needs to be discussed. Communicating every aspect of the plan to all parties involved can help the process go along smoothly.
